1. Background

This surveillance report is produced in continuation to previous report published on 11th May 2018 and due budget constraint previous surveillance was conducted in five sites viz., Samdrupjongkhar, Phunstholing, Samtse, Thimphu (CFM) and Gelephu.

Current surveillance was carried out by 30 BAFRA field offices as listed below to understand the status of Bt-brinjal in the Bhutanese market. Since Bt-brinjal is approved in Bangladesh it is highly likely that this brinjal may come into Bhutan through informal trade.

Any activity involving GMO in viable forms is prohibited by the Biosafety Act of Bhutan 2015 and its Rules and Regulations 2018. According to Bangladesh Agricultural Research Institute (BARI), it developed the four Bt-brinjal varieties namely, Bt-Uttara, Bt-Kajla, Bt-Nayantara and Bt-Isd 006 as depicted in table 1 below.

As per the internet search, Bt-brinjal was developed by the Maharashtra Hybrid Seeds Company (Mahyco). The company used a DNA construct containing the cry1Ac gene, a CaMV 35S promoter and the selectable marker genes nptII and aad, to transform young cotyledons of brinjal plants. A single copy elite event, named EE-1, was selected and introduced into hybrid brinjal in Mahyco's breeding program. As per the literature review, cry1Ac is from Bacillus thuringiensis subsp. Kurstaki strain HD73, which produces delta-endotoxin and confers resistance to lepidopteran insects by selectively damaging their midgut lining.

Bt-brinjal was developed to prevent itself from one of the serious pest called fruit and shoot borer (FSB) Leucinodes orbonalis and also from other insect pests.

2. Objectives

The objective of this study is to:

- ❖ Study the presence of Bt-brinjal in vegetable markets/shops in Bhutan by using lateral flow test strips specific to Cry1Ac protein

3. Materials and Methods

3.1. Study design

This survey was conducted by 28 BAFRA field offices to find out if the four varieties of bt-brinjal shown in table 1 are present in the Bhutanese market.

Table 1: Varieties of brinjal

Bt-Uttara	Bt-Kajla	Bt-Nayantara	Bt-ISD 006

Pictures shown above were downloaded from the internet, as Mahyco, India was not in position to share the pictures.

3.2. Sample size and sampling method

Sample size was not estimated as this is a pilot survey and followed a convenience sampling method.

3.3. Sample testing

GMO can be tested either by using a rapid test kit or by more advanced techniques such as real time PCR. Since advanced techniques are quite expensive, it is always better and cost effective to have screening of GMO elements at field level and then carry out advanced test should the sample be positive. It is understood that the inserted DNA and its corresponding protein are found in all the cells of the plant and as such, the seeds and/or plant tissue material (e.g. leaves) can be used for GMO testing. DesiGen Xpresstrips are designed to detect the presence of Cry1Ac Bt protein in Brinjal leaf tissue extracts, however since it is very difficult to get leaf samples from the vegetable market/shop, we have used Brinjal fruits for this survey.

3.4. Test protocol

Sample preparation, testing and interpretation of the results were done as per the manufacturer's protocol as provided below and represented by figure 1;

3.4.1. How the strip works

Plants that contain the Cry1Ac gene express Cry1Ac Bt protein residues in their tissues. DesiGen Xpresstrips are lateral flow devices which detect the protein in extracts from plant samples. Each strip has a sample absorbing pad at one end indicated by the word "Sample" and arrows. This end is to be inserted in the tissue extract. The extract moves up the pad into the clear window, and reaches a second absorbent pad at the top of the strip.

3.4.2. Cross reactivity:

The DesiGen Xpresstrips does not distinguish between Cry1Ac residues and Cry1Ab residues in plant extracts.

3.4.3. Sample extraction:

Note: Avoid cross-contamination between samples

Adapted (For brinjal fruits extracts): collect a reasonable amount of brinjal fruits from vegetable counters and cut into pieces and put into a mcf tube. Add 500µl-sample extraction buffer. Further crush with a pestle for 30 seconds. Place the Xpresstrip directly in this.

3.4.4. Running the assay

1. Remove an Xpresstrip from its pack and place the sample end (indicated by the arrows) into the tissue extract, taking care that the liquid level should not cross the white line indicated just below the arrow on strip.
2. The liquid will move up the strip into the top absorbent pad. A line should appear in the white window, near the top absorbent pad, indicating that the assay is functioning properly.
3. Wait for 10 minutes before removing the strip from the sample. If a second line is present near the sample pad, the extract is positive for cry1Ac. If no line appears, the sample is negative.

Note:

1. Please remove the strips immediately after the control line completely appears.
2. The user is advised to confirm results by another method.
3. The results are valid up to 15 minutes of development of red bands.

4. Result and discussion

A total of 1062 samples were tested by 30 BAFRA offices as shown in table 2 and detailed results received from respective BAFRA offices are provided from Table 3 till 31 below.
